

Years of Saving Wild Lives

Barred Owl Pair

A Pair of Barred Owls (a male and female) that came to us together after getting stuck in a chimney of someone's home after mistaking the chimney as a cavity to nest in, as they are cavity nesters. The pair came in to WINC together on Valentine's Day 2010.

They were a little thin and dehydrated, so after about two weeks of care they were able to be released together. The pictures show them in side by side mews in our ICU, then together in the flight enclosure and then their release.

The cost of their two weeks of care was probably about $30-40 for food, $20 for fluids.